The National League of Cities (NLC) in cooperation with the International City/County Management Association (ICMA) will be conducting an emergency training program "Crisis Leadership for Local Officials" funded by the Department of Homeland Security.

Our nation continues to experience a growing number of natural and man-made disasters and it is important that our leaders are prepared. This can be challenging when local, state and federal laws constantly change. This two day training is being offered as an educational tool for the four phases of emergency and disaster management: prevention, protection, response and recovery. Class size for this training program is limited to 40 attendees which will be selected from the applications received. The target audience is primarily elected and appointed municipal officials.

To learn more about the program, visit NLC's website at www.nlc.org.

Apply today to attend this two day seminar! Elected and Appointed Officials Have First Priority.
